

Rebecca Hitchcock

MUSICIAN & CHOIR DIRECTOR

Welcome to my latest Blog

Harmonies in Motion: Exciting updates through My Musical World.....

Welcome to my latest blog post, where I am thrilled to share the vibrant and ever-evolving world of my music endeavors with you. Whether you're a part of my choirs or simply a music enthusiast eager to experience something unique, there's something for everyone in the coming months. Let's dive in!

Choirs and Upcoming Performances

My choirs are thriving, and I'm excited to announce that we have some fantastic summer performances lined up! If you're not already part of my choirs, I warmly invite you to come and watch us perform...stayed tuned for dates.. Trust me, there will be a twist that you won't want to miss!

This year with Sing for Happiness, we have planned some unique experiences such as cave singing and pop performances for a charity close to my heart. With almost three years with my Euphoric Harmony choir and two years with my Sing for Happiness choir, I have a wealth of material to share. I'm also planning a choir trip and organising a one-day camp—so much excitement ahead!

The energy and enthusiasm from our Junior Harmony kids music club are infectious, and I'm proud of the progress we're making.

In addition, I have an exciting new venture at a local school where I'll be running an after-school music club. This is a wonderful opportunity to spread the joy of music to even more young minds.

The Joy of Arranging Music

One of the greatest joys I experience is arranging music for my choirs and other bands. It's a gift that keeps on giving, and I cherish every moment. When I arrange music, I often bring music score drafts to my singers and work collaboratively with them. Unlike computers, humans can add a unique touch with their breath, emotion, and creativity, which is why I love arranging music in real-time with my choir members before I make the master copy on the computer.

Sometimes, my choir members surprise me by singing beautiful harmonies that weren't in the original arrangement of mine. When this happens, I embrace it wholeheartedly, saying, "It's in!" Their involvement enriches our music and brings a special magic to our sessions and performances.

Workshops and Learning Opportunities

I'm always exploring new ways to enhance my workshops and offer something different from our regular activities. While learning new songs is wonderful, I believe in the importance of teaching and applying diverse singing techniques. My upcoming workshop will focus on this aspect, providing participants with valuable skills they can take away. See if you are free on Sat 1st February from 2pm - 5pm at Christ Church Purley. See my main page for details.

YouTube and the Digital Frontier

In today's digital age, social media has become an essential tool for connecting with a broader audience. Although stepping into the realm of YouTube is a bit out of my comfort zone, I'm gradually embracing it. I'd love for you to follow my channel, where I share my musical knowledge and interests. Here's the link: 🌐 rebecca Hitchcock

While I see the potential of artificial intelligence in the music industry, I also acknowledge its complexities. It's an intriguing balance between innovation and maintaining the human touch that music so richly deserves.

Stay Connected....

I hope you'll stay with me on this musical journey. Your support means the world to me, and I'm excited to see where our paths will cross next. Thank you for being part of this incredible adventure. Let's keep the music alive and thriving!