

T. H. Wickenden Honored at Denison University

T. H. Wickenden

The honorary degree of Doctor of Science was conferred upon Thomas H. Wickenden, who retired in 1954 as Vice-President of Inco, Inc., and Manager of its Development and Research Division, at the 116th Annual Commencement Exercises of Denison University, Granville, Ohio, on June 10th.

The degree was conferred in recognition of Mr. Wickenden's substantial contributions in the field of metallurgy. Well known in engineering circles in the automotive industry, numerous inventions connected with the use of nickel in cast iron are credited to him, and his papers on the metallurgy of steel and cast iron and on other engineering subjects have been widely published in trade and technical journals in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom.

Member of a pioneer Toledo, Ohio, family, Mr. Wickenden attended Denison University from 1906 to 1909 and was awarded an Alumni Citation for "outstanding achievements and services" in 1951. He graduated from the University of Michigan in 1913 with the degree of Bachelor of Chemical Engineering. In 1953, the University of Michigan College of Engineering granted him a citation as a Distinguished Alumnus "in recognition of his outstanding achievements and of his contributions to the development of the field of engineering." Although Mr. Wickenden retired from active service with Inco in June, 1954, he continued until recently as a consultant on special development and research projects.
