

The first Locomotive

The Walking Horse, Lancashire's first steam locomotive, was built by Robert Daglish in 1812 at the Haigh foundry for colliery owner John Clarke, and it entered service the following year. It was the first of three engines that hauled coal wagons from Clarke's collieries at Orrell and Winstanley to the Leeds and Liverpool Canal at Crooke

29 Clarke's wagon road at Winstanley, showing the stone sleeper-blocks. On here ran Dalglish's Yorkshire Horse, Lancashire's first steam locomotive

Wigan Archive Services

The map below, shows the tramways from Orrell and Winstanley to the canal at Crooke. This includes Clarke's tramway, which was the line, which Dalglish's walking horse first pulled the coal from pit head to canal in 1812.

Wigan Archives Services