THE Compiler and Publisher of this, the first Directory that has ever appeared for Wigan and Neighbourhood, begs to tender his sincere thanks to the numerous Subscribers and Advertisers who have so liberally patronised the undertaking, and trusts that the arrangement of the Work will meet with the approbation of his Supporters.

In addition to the information usually given in local directories, the reader will find an historical account of Wigan, and brief sketches of the neighbouring Villages, which add considerably to the interest of the volume. Altogether, the Compiler believes that without making it unnecessarily large, he has succeeded in including every fact of importance to his object, and made "THE WIGAN DIRECTORY" a valuable work of reference for the whole of the WIGAN UNION and the Village of GOLBORNE.

WIGAN.

THE town of Wigan was of importance many centuries ago. It is a parliamentary and municipal borough, a market and post town, a township and parish, and gives its name to the Union of parishes. The Parish of Wigan contains the Townships of Abram, Aspull, Billinge-Chapel-End, Billinge-Higher-End, Dalton, Haigh, Hindley, Ince, Orrell, Pemberton, Upholland, Wigan, and Winstanley, in the Hundreds of Salford and West Derby, and in the South-East and South-West Divisions of the County. It is in the Diocese of Chester, the Rural-Deanery of Warrington, and the Archdeaconry of Liverpool. It is 88 miles south from Lancaster, 16 south from Preston, 14 north from Warrington, 18 north-west from Manchester, 19 north-east from Liverpool, 10 west from Bolton, 10 north-east from St. Helens, and 195 N.N.W. from London.

The principal part of the town is situate on rising ground of considerable steepness towards the north and east, and the town mainly extends from this to the north, north-east, and south. The river Douglas runs through it, being crossed by several bridges. This stream was made navigable under the powers of an act of parliament obtained in 1719, but since the construction of the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, the river course has been disused, as the Canal Company bought out the rights of navigation. The Douglas forms a great bend at Wigan, having come southerly from Rivington Pike, it now turns west and north to its confluence with the Ribble, above Southport.

The town stands mainly on three acclivities, two on the right and one on the left bank of the Douglas, though the southern part of the town is nearly level. There have been great improvements within the last few years, old buildings have been removed, and new streets opened. The chief public buildings are the Borough Gaol, with magistrates' courts and public offices, recently erected at a cost of more than £17,000; the Public Hall, in King-street; the Moot Hall (shortly to be removed), the Town Hall, Dispensary, Grammar School, Theatre, Savings' Bank, and County Court.

The Union Workhouse has accommodation for 800 inmates. It is situate on the west side of the town, in Frog Lane, and was built in 1857. The Union includes the following places:—Abram, Ashton-in-Makerfield (or Ashton-le-Willows), Aspull, Billinge-Chapel-End, Billinge-Higher-End, Blackrod, Dalton, Haigh, Hindley, Ince-in-Makerfield, Orrell, Parbold, Shevington, Standish-with-Langtree, Upholland, Wigan, Winstanley, Worthington, and Wroughton. The County Court, which is held every fortnight, has jurisdiction over a district co-extensive with the Union.

The magistrates hold petty sessions in the new Court House in Rodney-street, every Monday and Wednesday, at ten o'clock; and the County Magistrates also hold petty sessions for the Wigan Division, in the same building, on Fridays, at eleven o'clock. There is also a court of quarter sessions, with a recorder as judge.

There are, besides the Parish Church of All Saints, four other churches in the town; three Roman Catholic churches, and numerous other Independent, Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, and other chapels of Nonconformists, which will be found in the Directory. All the episcopal and catholic churches have day schools attached, and there is a Wesleyan school in Dicconson-street. All of these are under government inspection. The other educational establishments will be found mentioned under their proper heads.

The history of Wigan is not less interesting than that of many towns of greater size. There are evidences that it was a place of note before British history began. The Ancient Britons probably had one of their entrenched towns on the hill which has the Parish Church near its summit, for when the greater part of south Lancashire was marshland or forest, such an isolated elevation, commanding a view of the valley of the Douglas, would be likely to attract the notice of men whose small tribes were constantly quarrelling, and whose subsistence was the chase. When the Romans had completed their conquest of Britain, they made roads that passed through Wigan, but there is no reason to believe that there was a station of any importance here, or that the roads were other than vicinal ways. The main road from the north to Mancunium (Manchester), possibly passed down the Blackrod valley, the military station of Coccium being probably near that village; but the road that can be traced from Wigan northwards towards Ribchester, and south towards Warrington, was merely to connect this place with the main system of Roman military roads. The dome-shaped monicule between Whelley and the bed of the Douglas, though attributed as a military post to Cromwellian times, is more likely to have been a Roman post of observation. Roman coins have been found in Wigan and more at Standish. The silent evidences of urn, coin, and earth-work are all of Roman domination that is left about Wigan, and but little of these.

When the Romans were gone away the British had many struggles with the Saxons, and that hero of romance, King Arthur, is said to have won several battles in and about Wigan; but the sole authority for this statement is the following passage from Nennius's History of the Britons:—"Then it was that the magnanimous Arthur, with all the kings and military force of Britain, fought against the Saxons, and though there were many more noble than himself, yet he was twelve times chosen their commander and was as often conqueror. . . . The second, third, fourth and fifth were on another river, by the Britons called Douglas (or Dubglas) in the region Linuis. . . . The eighth was near Gurnion Castle, where Arthur bore the image of the Holy Virgin Mother of God upon his shoulders, and through the power of our Lord Jesus Christ and the holy Mary, put the Saxons to flight. . . . The twelfth was a most severe contest, when Arthur penetrated to the hill Badon. . . ." There are no two commentators of note who are agreed about where these places are. Some say Dubglas is our Douglas, others place it in Scotland. The time at which Nennius wrote is variously ascribed to the seventh and ninth centuries, while the manuscript used is not earlier than the tenth. The only one of the twelve battles elsewhere mentioned is the twelfth, by Gildas, but who Gildas was, no one knows, and he mentions not the name of Arthur, so that this period of the history of Wigan we must leave in darkness as we find it.

We know nothing certain of Wigan in Saxon times, but the syllable gate in the nomenclature of streets is understood to indicate a Saxon origin, and so we may be assured of its existence then, though it is not unlikely that in the later Saxon period it was almost entirely uninhabited, as it is never mentioned in the celebrated Domesday Book. One reason for this may be that it was, probably, an island amongst marshland and mere, and the Haigh side of the Douglas would be more likely to maintain a population. The origin of the name is said to be Saxon, Wigen or Wibiggin, but both are doubtful.

After the Norman Conquest, and when the Normans and Saxons were beginning to form one nation, Wigan emerged from obscurity, and Henry III. granted its first charter. He also made his secretary, John Monsel, rector of Wigan and lord of the manor, and the manorial rights have remained with the rectors till the Corporation purchased them. In the 23rd of Edward III. Wigan sent two burgesses to Parliament, and though none were sent in the next reign, and there have been other intervals, yet it has since been the usual practice to return two burgesses for this purpose. The feeble reign of Edward II. was marked by trouble, and it would seem that the king passed this way more than once. Thomas Earl of Lancaster rebelled and was defeated at Borough bridge, and afterwards executed. Among those who aided him were "Ricardus de Holland," "Willielmus de Bradshaghe," and "Robertus de Cliderhou, parson of Wygan." The last was examined before the king for sending his sons to the earl and preaching treason in the church. He was fined £200, which was an enormous sum in those days and bespoke the value of the living and manor of Wigan. William of Bradshughe (or Haigh) seems to have escaped arrest, possibly by keeping out of the way, and he was a knight of the shire in this and the succeeding reign. The payment for borough members was two-shillings a day at this time, and six or eight days were allowed for the journey to Westminster. It was in these times that Lady Mabel Bradshigh performed her penance of walking bare-footed from Haigh to Mab's Cross, in Standishgate, for marrying while her lord was away crusading in Palestine.

When John of Gaunt married Blanche of Lancaster, to her vast possessions he added many gifts from the king (Edward III.) his father. He obtained the title of duke, and about 1360, among other grants, he obtained the advowson of Wigan Church and had it confirmed soon after. The county palatine—the earldom—and the Duchy of Lancaster passed through the line of Lancastrian kings, and Wigan would have its full share of the troubles in the Wars of the Roses. The earldom of Derby (West Derby) having become separate from the Duchy, the Stanley family became chiefs in this part of the county, and Sir Edward aided Lord Surrey at the battle of Flodden Field with bowmen and billmen from Wigan (A.D. 1513), as well as other parts of the county.

In the changes that came after the Reformation a great decay of towns is mentioned, and in the act relating to this subject, in 1544, Wigan is enumerated among the suffering boroughs. In 1553 there was a general military muster of the whole realm, and the Hundred of Derby (West) produced the highest number of men in Lancashire—viz., 430, of which 52 were contributed by Wigan, and 67 by Prescot.

In the reign of Queen Mary, the Protestants of Lancashire felt the force of persecution; and John Bradford, who was burnt in 1555, was a native of Manchester, and had preached in Wigan and the neighbouring towns. The chantry at the parish church was restored by this queen. Another military muster in the year 1574 gives 1090 men for West Derby.

In this reign (Elizabeth's) Roman Catholics were persecuted for their assumed want of loyalty, and the laws against them were very severe, and in 1586 "the parson of Wigan" made a presentment of the names of priests concealed in the neighbourhood and of the persons who harboured them. Two years later we have an account of certain payments to officers of the Duchy of Lancaster, and among them figures £5 10s. Od. as the fee of the "clerke and steward of Wigan," showing into whose pockets went the balance of the value of the rectory and manor.

Coming to the times of the Stuarts we find that Orlando Bridgman, Esq., and Alexander Rigby, Esq., represented Wigan in the famous Long Parliament till they left it to attend the king in the war. Wigan was held for Charles, and in 1642 James, Earl of Derby, marched from it to besiege Blackburn. In 1643 the Earl, who was strongly entrenched here, was driven out by Sir John Smoaton, and though there were some vicissitudes it was mostly held for the Parliament after. In 1646 a large number of persons were compelled to compound for their estates by the Parliament, and among them were the Oerards, of Ince and Bryn, Ralph Brown, of Aspull, and William Brown and William Tempest, of Wigan. The last two paid £20 and £7 respectively.

The Duke of Hamilton quartered his troops here the night before Cromwell passed through and defeated him at Winwick, in 1648. Lord Derby was also defeated here at the battle of Wigan Lane, by Colonel Lilburne, August, 25th, 1651, which prevented him carrying aid to Charles at Worcester, where he was finally defeated by Cromwell ten days after. Sir Thomas Tyldesley was killed in this battle (Wigan) and a monument was erected to his memory in 1689, which still stands on the scene of the conflict. Wigan sent members to some of Cromwell's parliaments.

At the restoration, Wigan was conspicuous by the operation of the Act of Uniformity, for its rector, the Rev. Charles Hotham, was one of the noble nonconforming clergy who went out of their livings rather than subscribe anything against their conscience.

We conclude this notice with the fact that, the young pretender, Prince Charles Edward Stuart, passed through Wigan on his way to Derby in the ill-fated expedition in 1745. He slept at the Manor-house, in Bishopgate, on the night of the 28th of November.

Her Majesty Queen Victoria often passes through Wigan, but it is with the speed of the express train, on her journeys to and from Scotland.

The trade of Wigan has been a growing one. It has, besides mines of ordinary coal, a peculiar species known as cannel, which has been worked from the time of Henry VIII. It is of great value from its highly inflammable nature, and it is extensively used for making gas for illuminating purposes. In the Western district of the Lancashire coal field there were ninety-nine collieries in 1867, of which seventy-seven were around Wigan, and other pits have been opened since. The total production of coal in the Western district for the above year was nearly six million tons. The Leeds and Liverpool Canal was opened to Liverpool in 1774, which gave a great impulse to trade. The canal was opened through in 1796. The branch to Leigh, connecting Wigan with Manchester, was opened in 1820. The North Union Railway also connects Wigan with the London and North Western system, and the main line of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway (Western division) also passes through the town. The manufacture of spades, picks, &c., is also an important branch of trade; and in 1858 the Kirkless Hall Company commenced the smelting of iron from the ore, and the make of iron is now one of the staple trades.

The proximity of Liverpool and the facilities for carriage naturally brought a portion of the cotton manufacture to Wigan, where it has flourished to a considerable extent, there being several mills of the very largest size, and though at present, with all other trades somewhat depressed, it is hoped that it will again attain at least its former prosperity. The trade was totally stopped during the recent American War, when the populace manifested exemplary patience under very trying circumstances, which, however, were greatly relieved by the munificent contributions sent from all parts of the world to Lancashire, and which were liberally distributed by a local committee, a history of whose acts has been well written by Mr. Richard Lea, the Secretary, in the local papers the Observer and Examiner, which are provincial journals of a high order, having a joint circulation now of upwards of 12,000 copies weekly.

During the Cotton Famine the streets of the town were greatly improved, paving and sewerage being done to a large extent, and new roads were laid out by the otherwise unemployed mill hands. A portion of the funds remaining in the hands of the Lord Mayor of London has been allotted to the building of an infirmary, and other liberal contributions having been made, a suitable building for this purpose will now soon be erected.

The government of this ancient borough, all old charters being superseded, is now vested in a Corporation consisting of a Recorder, Mayor, ten Aldermen, thirty Councilmen, a Coroner and Town Clerk. For municipal purposes the borough is divided into five wards—viz. Scholes, Swinley, St. George's, All Saints, and Queen-street Wards. The present Mayor, Thomas Heald, Esq., has been three times elected.

Neither the Reform Bill of 1832 nor that of 1867 has altered the number of members returned to Parliament; but the latter increased the number of electors from 900 to 4,400. The present members are Henry Woods, Esq., of Gillibrand Hall, near Chorley, and John Lancaster, Esq., of Ashfield, in the parish of Standish, who were elected in November, 1868.

Fairs are held on Holy Thursday, and the day before and after June 27th, October 28th, 29th, and 30th. The market days are Monday and Friday. The Wigan Union contained at the Census of 1851, 77,539 inhabitants, and in 1861, 94,561, of which the borough numbered 37,658; acreage of the parish, 28,483.

ASPULL is a township having an area of 1,879 acres, and in 1861 its population was 4,290; being at the rate of about 1,450 to the square mile. It contains the villages of Aspall, Aspall moor, Dicconson mill, and Pennington-green. In Aspall there is a marshy land or moor that is common land, but its limits are gradually being reduced by coal-pits and buildings. The Wigan Coal and Iron Co. are the principal coal owners, but Messrs. William Woods and Son (Henry Woods, Esq., M.P.) have cannel pits in the township. Lord Kingdow built a church at Pennington-green in 1859, and the Roman Catholics, Wesleyans, and Independents have also places of worship in the township

BLACKROD is a township and village in the Union and County Court district of Wigan, from which it is distant about five miles by road, and seven by the new railway route via Hindley and Dicconson mill. It is over seven miles from Bolton, of which it forms part of the parish, though it has a church of which the living is in the gift of the vicar of Bolton. It is in the rural deanery of Bolton, the diocese of Manchester, and the Hundred of Salford. It lies near the line of the Lanc. and Yorkshire Railway from Bolton to Preston. The Leeds and Liverpool Canal passes at a little distance to the north. There is a grammar school whose income of £266 includes an exhibition to Pembroke College, Cambridge. There are large charities, a school supported by the Earl of Crawford, and a national school. The church is dedicated to St. Catherine, and there is a Wesleyan chapel. There is a fair held on the 12th of July. The line of a Roman road is traceable in the township, and there is every probability that here was a Roman station named Coccium in the Iter of Antoninus, on the military road from Mancunium BILLINGE—CHAPEL-END and HIGHER-END—comprises the two townships thus named, and an acreage of 2,678. A part of Chadwick-Green is in Billinge-Chapel-End. The village—Chapel-End—lies about midway between Wigan and St. Helens, i.e., about five miles from each. Sir Robert Gerard, Baronet, of Garswood, and Meyrick Banke, Esq., of Winstanley, own most of the land, the latter being lord of the manor. Bispham Hall, in Higher-End, is the residence of W. H. Branker, Esq. The church is a plain, substantial building, the living being in the gift of the Rector of Wigan. The Wesleyans and Roman Catholics have each their chapels. A bequest of John Eddleston, dating from 1672, partly supports a national school here. The coal mines are worked to a limited extent; nail making is also carried on, and the quarrying and working of excellent building stone gives employment to a portion of the population, which in 1861 was 3,065. Billinge situated on elevated ground occupying the southern end of the ridge, of which Dalton is the northern, and there is here also a building on the highest point—Billinge Beacon—which like Ash-hurst Beacon, is used as a sea mark. The two beacons are about five miles distant from each other, and to the west of the ridge lies the plain that stretches from the Mersey to the Ribble, and over which vessels on the Irish sea can be plainly distinguished. The nearer view from Billinge includes the extensive woods that surround Lathom House, the Knowsley woods, Bickerstaffe Church, and Ormskirk. Eastward the view includes Rivington Pike, Haigh Hall, Wigan, Leigh, Bowdon, and the hills of Derbyshire and North East Lancashire, and on rare occasions the hills in Shropshire are seen across the Cheshire plain.

DALTON is an agricultural township, forming the most western portion of Wigan Parish, and also of the Union. It is about six miles west by north from Wigan, and about the same east by north from Ormskirk. It contains Ashurst Hall, now a farm-house, a portion of which dates from the first half of the 17th century, and also Ashurst Beacon, a building on the end of a ridge of considerable elevation, which serves as a mark to vessels on the Irish sea.

 From it the off scape includes the Welsh hills to Penmaenmawr, Blackcombe in Cumberland, and the hills of Derbyshire. The area is 2000 acres; the population 453.

HAIGH, a township and village north by east of Wigan, is remarkable for the mines of Cannel and the mineral of nearly equal value King coal, which is obtained as well as other varieties of coal. The owner being the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, and the Wigan Coal and Iron Company the principal workers. Lord Crawford has a seat here, Haigh Hall, which from its elevated situation is a conspicuous object for many miles. The extensive "Plantations" around it reach into the borough of Wigan, and portions of them form a beautiful and favourite walk of the Wigan townspeople. The Haigh Foundry Company's Works, on the banks of the Douglas, turns out castings of the heaviest kinds, and also bar iron, spades, picks, &c., which the trade of the district requires. The church was built by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and is in the gift of the Rector of Wigan.

HINDLEY, a township, town, and parish, has a station on the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, three miles from Wigan and seven from Bolton. It is in the deanery of Warrington, the archdeaconry of Liverpool, and the diocese of Chester, and South-West Division of the county. It was formerly a single street, forming the road from Wigan to Bolton, it has however recently greatly extended in other directions. It is stated that only four churches were consecrated in South Lancashire from 1660 to 1717, one of these being at Hindley.
 The present edifice (All Saints), however, dates from 1766, and there is a new church dedicated to St. Peter erected in 1864. The registers date from 1689. The living is in the gift of the Rector of Wigan.
 There are various congregations of Nonconformists, several of which also have schools. There are charities to the value of £85 distributed annually. There is a successful co-operative store here, connected with which is a newsroom and library, and a commodious hall, used for public meetings, lectures, &c. There are several cotton mills and many collieries in the district. The Earl of Ellesmere, Sir Humphrey de Trafford, Roger Leigh, Esq., Messrs. Hargreaves, and J. Walmsley, Esq., are the chief landowners. The area is four square miles, and the population, in 1861, was 8,477. The property is rated at £24,420.
 Hindley Green and Platt Bridge are hamlets, each having a station on the Wigan and Tyldesley Railway. The former is about one-and-a-half miles S.E., and the latter the same distance S.W. from Hindley town.

Low Green adjoins Platt Bridge.

INCE-IN-MAKERFIELD, is a township in the parish of Wigan, touching the south-east boundary of the borough. This district supplies the greatest quantities of Cannel and King coal, and most extensive collieries are worked within the township. There are also forges and foundries where spades, edge tools, and other iron goods are made; and the large works and iron furnaces of the Wigan Coal and Iron Company are situated at Kirkless Hall. The coal-pits, coke-ovens, furnaces, forges, foundries, chemical, and other works constitute Ince a miniature "Black Country." The Lancashire and Yorkshire and the London and North Western Railways pass through, and the Ince Cemetery, and a larger cemetery for Wigan Borough are in the south-west of the township, to the windward of most of the works, and are very pleasantly situated. The old Hall of Ince, a timbered building, is now used as the offices for one of the large collieries. Ince is constituted an ecclesiastical district, and has a handsome new church, besides Dissenting chapels. The population of Ince in 1861 was 8,266, now largely increased.

ORRELL is a township and village three miles west from Wigan. It is in the South-Western division of the county, and the parish and union of Wigan. There is a school-church belonging to the Established Church, and various dissenting chapels. There was formerly a nunnery here, the grounds of which form gardens now much resorted to. Coal is found abundantly in the township. There is a cotton mill and nailmaking. There is a small charity distributed annually to the poor of Orrell, the interest of £100 left by James Thomason in 1730. The chief landowners are the successor of Lord Kingsdown (Roger Leigh, Esq.) and Meyrick Bankes, Esq. There is a station on the L. & Y. Railway from Manchester to Liverpool. The acreage is 1,542 and the population in 1861 was 2,934.

FAR MOOR is a small village in the township.

PEMBERTON is a very extensive township west of and adjoining the Borough of Wigan, from which it is separated by the river Douglas. It comprises the villages of Lamberhead Green, Newtown, Goose Green and Smithy Brook, the first of which is the most important and is three miles from Wigan. It has a Mechanics' Institution, and shows other signs of intellectual activity not common in country villages. There is a plain brick church, of which the living is in the presentation of the Rector of Wigan. It is a perpetual curacy valued at £200 per annum. There are good National and Wesleyan schools here, the Wesleyans having also a good chapel, and also the Primitive Methodists. The L. & Y. railway passes through the township, and there is a station. There are several collieries and stone quarries; at Newtown a cotton mill, manure, and iron works. Though the township is very populous the supply of water is precarious, but one well at Lamberhead Green (Pingate) is noted for its excellent quality. Hawkey hall is an old timbered building now used as a farmhouse.

STANDISH is a large parish in the Hundred of Leyland and Northern division of Lancashire, including the townships of Standish-with-Langtree, Shevington, and Worthington. The village of Standish is three miles N.N.W. from Wigan. There is a church dating from the reign of Elizabeth, erected by Pastor Mordie, the first Protestant rector, who had been a Franciscan friar, and to whom a monument exists in the church. The living, which is a valuable one, is held by the Rev. Canon Brandreth, who resides at the Rectory, near the village. Standish Hall, formerly the seat of the Lords of the Manor—the Standish family—is now in the occupation of Nathaniel Eckersley, Esq., J.P. It is surrounded by a beautiful park and woods. Coal is worked throughout the parish. There is a paper mill, and the Wigan Waterworks are in the parish. There is a grammar school and a national school. There is a station on the Warrington and Preston railway. The population of the township in 1861 was 3,054. The area 3,257 acres. The old Roman road from Wigan northwards, passed through and a few Roman relics have been found here.

an area of 1,706 acres, and a population of 1,615. It is mostly agricultural, but coal mines are extensively worked. At CROOKE, a hamlet in the township, is a free school.

At GATHURAT, a mile from Shevington, is a station on the Wigan and Southport Railway.

WORTHINGTON is mostly an agricultural township, south-east from Coppull station, on the Warrington and Preston line of the L. & N. W. Railway.

UPHOLLAND is a township, village, and Ecclesiastical district in the Parish of Wigan and Hundred of West Derby, four miles W. from Wigan. The church is dedicated to Thomas a-Becket, and dates from the 14th century. It was formerly attached to a priory of Benedictines. There are registers from A.D. 1600. There are chapels for Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The village is situated near the summit and centre of the ridge of which Billinge and Ashurst Beacons are the termini, and there is the same extensive view. Lord Skelmersdale is Lord of the Manor; but Roger Leigh, and Meyrick Bankes, Esqrs., are also landowners in the township. There is a grammar school dating from 1668.

WRIGHTINGTON is a township in the parish of Eccleston and hundred of Leyland and diocese of Manchester, in the northern division of the county. It is five miles N.W. from Wigan. There is a church for an Ecclesiastical district here, and chapels for various denominations of Dissenters. Wright-ington Hall, in the midst of a fine park, is the seat of Thomas Dicconson, Esq., late High Sheriff of the County. Attached to the Hall—likewise to Standish Hall—is a Roman Catholic Chapel. Appley

GOLBORNE is a rural parish and township, containing a considerable village five miles south of Wigan on the L and N W Railway. It contains a church dedicated to St.
 Thomas, of which the living is in the gift of the Earl of Derby. The vicar is the Rev. C. T. Quirk.
 There are chapels for Independents, Primitive and Wesleyan Methodists, and Roman Catholics, and a meeting-room for Christians, who decline to be called by any other name. There are cotton mills in the village.
