CCES Courses

CCES courses are accredited by the WCO. The Bachelor of Border Management, Graduate Certificate in Customs Administration, Graduate Diploma of Customs Administration and Master of Customs Administration all have an international focus, making them suitable for professionals from all around the world. These courses have been designed for those engaged in government employment as well as those members of the international trading community who are required to meet cross-border regulatory requirements.

Postgraduate Degrees

Graduate Certificate in Customs Administration

The Graduate Certificate in Customs Administration is designed for those who wish to formalise, update or enhance their qualifications in the area of customs administration, customs law and trade facilitation. Completion of this course provides a clear pathway for further learning, with graduates earning credit towards the first two units of the Master of Customs Administration.

Graduate Diploma of Customs Administration

The Graduate Diploma of Customs Administration aims to qualify individuals from a variety of backgrounds, including customs and other public sector agencies and businesses involved in cross-border trade, to apply advanced knowledge and skills in a range of professional customs administration contexts. This course integrates technical skills with specialised customs administration theory and practice, and serves as a pathway to further learning.

Master of Customs Administration

The Master of Customs Administration addresses the demand for qualified professionals in the field of customs and border management. Students will study the roles and policy objectives of customs administrations, including key aspects of customs policy and practice, and different approaches to managing regulatory compliance. Students will gain knowledge in international customs law, key conventions and international best practice as promoted by the WCO.

Research Degrees

CCES is committed to excellence in research and strives to undertake nationally and internationally competitive research projects. It has attained a reputation for high-quality research in the areas of Customs, international trade and border management where it has particular depth and strength of academic and research capability, and offers PhD opportunities to candidates wanting to conduct research in these areas.
