Exercise 50

Tôny is a teacher of English. In the school holidays he and his friend Lûk are checking all the things in Tôny's classroom. What are they saying?

Tôny:

How many copies of Jane Eyre are there on that shelf?

Lûk:

Thirty five.

Tôny:

Thirty five? Aren't there forty?

Lûk:

No. There are thirty five. Is there a problem?

Tôny:

No problem. Five copies are missing, it seems.

Lûk:

And there's a box of pencils here. Count all the pencils?

Tôny:

Oh no. There's no need for that. Here are eight A4 notepads in the drawer. Is there any paper in the cupboard too?

Lûk:

Yes. In the cupboard there's a packet of paper for the printer, five hundred sheets.

Tôny:

I'll order some more. It's only enough for two weeks.

Lûk:

(tired of the work) What's the time now?

Tôny:

Eleven o'clock.

Lûk:

I'll be going soon. To meet a friend at twelve in the town centre.

Tôny:

Oh dear! The job isn't yet finished at all.

Lûk:

Maybe we can carry on tomorrow.

Tôny:

(speaking in a low voice) I'll be carrying on today, without help ...

Exercise 51

After walking on Carn Bre Crysten and Tôny are back in Camborne.

Tôny:

I'm thirsty.

Crysten:

Yes, I need a drink too.

Tôny:

We must sit down and drink something. Maybe in the coffee shop?

Crysten:

I'd rather buy a canned drink at the baker's. I'd like to walk some more.

Tôny:

In the coffee shop we can eat as well.

Crysten:

I'm not hungry.

Tôny:

But I'm very hungry.

Crysten:

All the time, apparently. I've got a bar of chocolate with me. We can share that.

Tôny:

Well, yes. But I'd prefer to eat a bit more. If we buy a canned drink at the baker's, I can get a sausage roll with it, and a doughnut.

Crysten:

Oh, I give up! We'd better go to the coffee shop. At least there's skinny latte at the coffee shop.

Tôny:

And coffee with sweet cream. And a toastie. And a blueberry muffin.

Crysten:

I shall eat a flapjack, that's all. But it's healthier, staying away from the baker's. Coffee then, my only option!
