Title: The Mysterious Library Object

One quiet Thursday afternoon, I was sitting in the school's library reading my favourite adventure book, Captain Underpants. The library was so quiet that I could hear the clock ticking on the wall and the turning of pages from other readers in the library. When I looked up to stretch my arms, I noticed something strange on the top shelf. It was a small, glowing box that I had never seen before and was almost sure it wasn't there before.

At first, I thought it was just a toy someone left behind. As I continued to watch the box, I noticed it glowed a soft blue light, and that made my heart beat faster. I felt curious but also a little nervous. I stood on my tiptoes and carefully took the box down from the shelf. As my hand touched the box, it began to hum quietly. It sounded and felt like a vibrating cell phone in my hand. Suddenly, the lid opened by itself!

Inside, I saw tiny pictures moving, like a tiny movie. The pictures showed people reading books from long ago. It felt like I was looking into the past. I gasped and almost dropped the box. I felt amazed and excited. I also felt proud because I discovered something special.

Just then, the librarian began walking towards me, and the box immediately stopped glowing. It looked normal again, like nothing magical ever happened. She then took the box from me and said, "You know toys are not allowed in the library. This will be confiscated until a parent comes for it!" That's when I knew I would never discover the mystery of the box.

Now, every time I go to the library, I wonder what other secrets are hiding between the books and am tempted to go looking!
