Title: My Crazy Movie Night

Last Friday night, my family and I were sitting on the couch watching a funny movie. The lights were turned off, and everyone had their favourite snacks. My little sister, Lily, was curled up with a bowl of popcorn on her lap. My mom and dad were laughing at the jokes, and I was just about to take a sip of my soda when suddenly, something really weird happened.

Out of nowhere, a small, fuzzy black thing dropped from the ceiling and landed right in Lily's lap! At first, we all thought it was just some popcorn she spilled, but then it started to move! Lily screamed so loud I almost dropped my soda. She jumped up, and popcorn flew everywhere like it was snowing in our living room.

Mom yelled, "What is that?" and Dad tried to shine his phone's flashlight on it. I squinted and saw it was a tiny baby bat! The poor thing looked just as scared as we were. Lily was hopping around, trying to brush the bat off her blanket, but it clung to the fabric with its little claws.

Dad quickly grabbed a towel and carefully scooped up the bat. My mom opened the back door, and Dad carried the bat outside. He let it go, and we watched it fly away under the porch light. Lily was still kind of shaky, but after we cleaned up the popcorn mess, we all started laughing about it. We even joked that the bat just wanted to watch the movie with us!

After that, we finished our movie, with the lights on this time, and Lily kept glancing up at the ceiling just in case. It was definitely a movie night we will never forget!
