

Aeschylus and the ORRESTIA

A presentation by Kevin Batton
January 22, 2021

I. Athens' Greatest Generation

A detailed marble bust of the Greek tragedian Aeschylus, showing a full, curly beard and a serious expression. The bust is positioned on the left side of the image.

Aeschylus

A photograph of the Parthenon on the Acropolis in Athens, Greece, taken during the "blue hour" of twilight. The temple's white marble columns and pediment are silhouetted against a dark, deep blue sky. The foreground shows the rugged, rocky terrain of the Acropolis.

Born in Athens c. 525 BCE, just after the death of Peisistratus

Aeschylus was in his teens
when Cleisthenes instituted democratic reforms of the Athenian constitution (508/7 BCE)—

300: Rise of an Empire (2014)

A still from the 1989 film 'Henry V' showing the titular character in full armor, including a blue surcoat with gold fleur-de-lis and a red tunic with gold lions. He is surrounded by cheering soldiers in a snowy field.

This day is call'd the feast of Crispian.
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-toe when this day is nam'd,
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbours,
And say "To-morrow is Saint Crispian."
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say "These wounds I had on Crispin's day."
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgot,
But he'll remember, with advantages,
What feats he did that day.

—Henry V iv.3

“This tomb in grainbearing Gela covers an Athenian, Aeschylus son of Euphorion, who died here. The famous grove of Marathon could tell of his courage and the longhaired Mede knew it well.”

II. Aeschylus
the Playwright

In the beginning, there was the dithyramb

In the beginning, there was the dithyramb

- sung by a chorus of 50
- performed at festivals in honor of Dionysus

Thespis invented tragedy ~534 BCE

Thespis invented tragedy ~534 BCE

(hence thespian)

Aeschylus introduced a second actor and reduced the chorus to 12, inventing tragedy as we know it.

- Depicts the Queen receiving the news of Xerxes' armies defeat at Salamis and Plataea

The Persians

A messenger describes the battle of Salamis (396-405):

“At once... they all pulled their oars together, struck the deep sea-water and made it roar... and from all of them together one could hear a great cry: “Come on, sons of the Greeks, for the freedom of your homeland, for the freedom of your children, your wives, the temples of your fathers’ gods, and the tombs of your ancestors!””

The Persians

A messenger describes the battle of Salamis (418-432):

“The hulls of our ships turned keel-up, and the sea surface was no longer visible, filled as it was with the wreckage of ships and the slaughter of men; the shores and reefs were full of corpses.... Our sufferings were so multitudinous that I could not describe them full to you if I were to talk for ten days on end: you can be certain that never have so vast a number of human beings perished in a single day.”

Seven Against Thebes

- Set in Thebes, as the sons of Oedipus battle for the city's throne

Suppliants

- Set outside Argos, as the daughters of Danaus seek refuge from Egypt
- Pelasgus, king of Argos, puts the fate of the Danaids to a democratic vote

Suppliants

Pelasgus says to the Egyptian herald (942-9):

“That is the unanimous vote that has been passed and enacted by the people of the city, never to surrender this band of women by force. This decision has been nailed down with a nail that has pierced right through, so it stays fixed. These words are not written on tablets, nor sealed up in folded sheets of papyrus: you hear them plainly from the lips and tongue of a free man.”

▽ The theatre of Dionysus in the second half of the fifth century. The skene at this time must have been made of wood. The arrangement shown here has three doorways and the actors can appear on the roof. The Odeon of Pericles is in the background.

△ A conjectural reconstruction of the theatre of Dionysus in the early fifth century BC. It is possible that there was no skene at all at this time. The temple of Dionysus is on the right.

- For ancient readers, Aeschylus' name was a byword for GRANDEUR
- His plots generally deal less with twists and reversals of fortune than the steady build-up of intensity toward an anticipated climax
- Choral songs are longer, denser, and more prominent than in later tragedians

- The language in both song and dialogue is lofty and poetic—dense in imagery, allusion, symbolism, and wordplay

- “Aeschylus was the first to enhance tragedy with highly heroic effects and to decorate the stage and to astound his audience’s eyes with splendor, through pictures and devices, with altars and tombs, trumpets, images, and Furies.”
- “Some say that during the performance of the Eumenides, when he brought the chorus [of Furies] on one by one, he so frightened the audience that children fainted and unborn infants were aborted.”
