

Soul Transmission - The True Nature of Peace

by Pedro Lima

Peace is not a dictionary word defined and categorized by an egoic, shallow society addicted to control, manipulation, and deception.

It is not found in hollow words, written, projected, or spoken, nor dictated by self-serving, parasitic, corrupt, and exploitative agendas that parade as virtue to look good in the herd landscape of illusion.

Society uses “peace” as a mask to justify control, order, and safety, validating oppression, superiority, and denial while sustaining conflict, division, and deception.

It decorates its ignorance with polished words and moral façades, mistaking obedience for harmony, silence for balance, and suppression for peace.

True peace cannot be performed, preached, or imposed.

It is not born from external validation or approval, it cannot be manufactured through shallow ideals or hollow agreements.

Peace arises from within, through the inner cultivation of energetic frequencies that elevate perception and awareness beyond the dualities of right and wrong, control and submission, victim and oppressor.

It is found only in the alignment, coherence, and authentic radiance of one’s own sovereign being, in the unwavering presence that chooses truth over comfort, awareness over ignorance, and inner harmony over outer performance.

Peace is a state of being, an energetic sanctuary where no matter what unfolds outside, consciousness remains centered, grounded, and clear.

It is maintained through awareness, discernment, and accountability for one’s own energy.

It does not depend on the world behaving peacefully, it depends on the soul remembering its own divine coherence.

Peace is not found.

Peace is embodied.

Peace is the sovereign frequency of one who no longer needs illusion to feel whole.