

The Ego's Societal Hollow Empire

by Pedro Lima

An ego-based society works relentlessly to imprint pre-conceived egoic ways of thinking, behaving, believing, and existing.

It indoctrinates fear, division, and parasitic narratives designed to uphold a false hierarchical status quo, a corrupt framework that feeds on obedience and keeps people compliant, subservient, and dependent on external approval.

It pushes hollow careers and soulless unfulfilling paths that benefit only a select few, those who cling to delusional pride, greedy ignorance, and deception as a means to dictate how others should live, act, and express themselves.

These fragile, self-serving egoic agendas attempt to mold individuals into roles that serve exploitation, paranoia, and megalomania.

This conditioning seeks to strip people of their sovereign, authentic voices, disconnect them from their inner truth, true essence, and pressure them into surrendering their inner power to false authority.

But illusion only survives where souls forget who they truly are beyond egoic identities, titles, materialistic, superficial attachments.
