

A Civilization Anchored in Fear

by Pedro Lima

An ego-based, curated, narcissistic society demands compliance, obedience, and subservience from those it seeks to control.

It regulates and over regulates to commodify human beings, reducing souls into identities, roles, labels, titles and functions to sustain its parasitic, self-serving, soulless agenda.

Through false hierarchical structures, it normalizes fear, ignorance, and hollow tyrannical, oligarchical narratives that bind the collective into codependency, subservience and quiet submission.

It cultivates a collective trapped in mediocrity, self-victimization, scarcity, and unworthiness.

A collective that roots its self-worth in external approval, validation, and the acceptance of people and systems that exploit them.

A collective that self-betrays, remaining stuck in judgment, karmic loops, and projection, avoiding the responsibility of facing its own unresolved fears, trauma, and emotional attachments.

Instead, society worships curated identities, titles, money, fame, performance, profit, and image. It polices authenticity. It rewards deception, manipulation, comparison, competition, exploitation, obedience, compliance and shallow performance.

It glorifies the “liars club” of status-driven illusion, expecting everyone to dim their light to fit into its egoic soulless exploitative social landscape.

People cling to pride, drama, chaos, denial, resistance, and the comfort of ignorance, but this avoidance only deepens their disconnection from truth.

What they fear most is the very thing that would free them: a deep, honest self-reflection and full accountability for their inner world.

To awaken is to shed the layers of conditioning, programming, societal imprinting, and ancestral patterns.

To remember who we truly are beneath illusion, hierarchy, chaos and fear.

To remember and reclaim the soul sovereignty that has never forgotten its own inner authority.

“When we shed curated identities, beliefs, habits, stories, conditioned self-betrays, and societal indoctrinated imprints, the soul remembers itself, and in the presence of that sovereign alchemical remembrance, raw, authentic, unfiltered, no false hierarchy can remain standing.” - Pedro
