

The Hollow Narcissistic Societal Curated Fragmented Masquerade

by Pedro Lima

A parasitic, narcissistic, hollow society seeks power, clout, status, hoarding, domination, and authority over others because it has severed itself from inner authority, inner sovereignty, and embodied authentic truth.

In doing so, it betrays its own soul, feeding instead on those who still carry integrity, dignity, honor, and unapologetic sovereign authenticity grounded in their Soul's raw truth.

Unable to meet itself honestly and with honor, it adopts self-victimhood as camouflage to preserve egoic attachment.

It pursues shortcuts, schemes, and manipulation, feeding on fear, scarcity, misery, mediocrity, speculation, and deception, hiding behind curated masks that mimic virtue while lacking inner substance.

It portrays itself as a guardian of order, safety, justice, progress, authority and superiority, while quietly demanding conformity, obedience, dependence, and subservience to its unspoken pact of collective self-betrayal.

This hollow, hypocritical, deceptive moral parasitic architecture celebrates the exploitation and downfall of others to anesthetize its own terror of egoic curated insignificance.

It legitimizes its absence of self-love, self-compassion, patience, forgiveness, and self-accountability by externalizing blame, pain, and trauma rather than integrating its fragmented and chaotic inner world.

What it refuses to face are the unresolved traumas, subconscious imprints, inherited generational wounds, and conditioned narratives, carried across lifetimes and reinforced by a societal indoctrination programming that overrides soul alignment, presence, and embodiment with integrity.

To sit with this truth would require radical honesty and self-accountability.

Self-accountability would dissolve the false self curated self-preserved identity it clings to for survival.

So it chooses egoic attachment over soul guidance and presence in truth.

It resists learning, growth, transcendence, and alchemical expansion of consciousness.

It avoids dissolving the parasitic identities, roles, and constructs that enslave it, remaining trapped by choice in karmic loops of projection, bitterness, envy, and performative, moralistic, curated, fragmented mediocre prideful righteousness.

Consumed by hollow parasitism, it dismisses and disowns self-responsibility for its inner state while projecting its burdens onto others, mistaking arrogance and pride for strength, malice and cruelty for clarity, purpose and ignorance for the illusion of status and power.

But none of these grants inner sovereignty. It merely postpones temporarily the inevitable karmic reckoning that mirrors back the very energies it projects, demanding realignment.

Playing the game of parasitism within a hollow society is a choice made beyond surface-level egoic attachments, it is a choice made at the level of spirit navigating consciousness through fear, lack, and unworthiness.

It is the surrender of inner authority to parasitic, low-vibrational forces that can only inhabit a host through consent, through self-deception and self-betrayal in exchange for curated, fragmented attachments, identities, roles, and self-conditioning.

These constructs are sustained by beliefs, habits, ideologies, paradigms, and dogmas that feed the illusion of separation, perpetuating the me versus you narrative that obscures our inherent interconnectedness, disconnecting us from our pure soul's essence.

In contrast, the alchemical path of self-transcendence, self-remembrance, and self-accountability, through chaos, fear, deception, lack, and even self-betrayal is not a choice. It is an honorable duty owed to the soul itself.

I choose to liberate myself from any self-conditioning, and any societal indoctrinated imprint.

I do not consent to any parasitic energies to be entitled or harvest my sacred energy.

I choose inner authority, inner sovereignty, inner truth, honoring with the highest level of integrity my Soul's journey of alchemical self-remembrance.
