

Inner Sovereignty Without Societal Binding

Narcissistic Parasitic Strings Attached

by Pedro Lima

A parasitic, narcissistic society conditions self-worth through curated, commodified nationalities, false identities, false hierarchies, false family frameworks, and performative, curated roles. It binds value to external status symbols so that worth must be granted, approved, or earned, never remembered or embodied in authentic sovereign truth.

My inherent sovereign worth has no societal strings attached.

It is not negotiated, validated, or diminished by any corrupt, parasitic, hollow systems, false hierarchies, or collective delusional agreements.

I am enough.

I am self-sufficient.

I am sovereign.

I am authentic.

I am present and grounded in my inner knowing, rooted in the limitless echoes of soul wisdom that require no permission for existence.

I embody my inner light unapologetically, regardless of the projections, opinions, or judgments of others.

I am not here to please, appease, or be subservient to any person, ideology, dogma, paradigm, identity, or indoctrinated, exploitative, narcissistic, hollow societal system.

I do not absorb or entertain egoic self-dysfunctional chaos, prideful curated ignorance, and trauma bond unresolved attachments, curated performance, manufactured reckless arrogant drama, self-victimization, or the unintegrated projections of others.

My presence is not an offering for approval.

My authentic truth is not up for negotiation.

My sovereignty stands, grounded in my inner compass, unwavering trust, self-reliance, and self-validation.

“My presence is not an offering for approval; my authentic truth is not up for negotiation. My sovereignty stands, unwavering and self-validated.” – Pedro