

Beyond the Veil of Parasitic Hollow Illusion of Power in a Narcissistic Society

by Pedro Lima

A parasitic, manipulative, narcissistic society is driven by a fragile, fragmented, curated, and inflated, prideful unintegrated ego.

In this dysfunctional world, falseness and projection are normalized, culturalized, and institutionalized. Its self-victimized members celebrate self-misery, malice, ill intent, conflict, punishment, deception, judgment, blame, gaslighting, striving to bind, bend, and condition others into parasitic, speculative, exploitative, and controlling hollow egoic agendas that serve only the egoic curated and fragmented self-preservation.

Honor, dignity, truth, integrity, authenticity, and sovereignty are compromised, neglected, and actively suppressed to appease fragile, insecure, curated egoic identities. People are indoctrinated and miseducated to obey, comply, become codependent, and remain subservient to external approval at every level of society.

A hierarchical, labyrinthic maze of hollow laws, rules, and norms is enforced to sustain curated authority figures and a corrupt oligarchical status quo, one that perpetuates control, exploitation, punishment, coercion, deception, dominance, and hypocritical moral superiority disguised as order, justice, security and progress.

Fear, scarcity, dependency, unworthiness, pride, and ignorance become the currencies that ensure hollow “elites” at the top of the societal Ponzi hierarchy accumulate and hoard resources, while the many survive at the mercy of approval and validation from parasitic, low-consciousness, spiritually impoverished beings.

In this self-victimized, fear-based, conniving, and complacent society, the few dictate how others should live, express themselves, think, and exist, keeping them docile, obedient, compliant, subservient, and submissive to perceived masters, gurus, specialists, and false authorities, where institutions are worshipped, feared, and idolized as the prideful pentacles of progress in culture, society, civilization.

The many grow comfortable with self-betrayal and self-conditioning, obsessed with fitting into a fake, performative, exhausting, hollow, deceptive societal club, the very same one that disseminates binding propaganda convincing the many that it is normal, even virtuous, to dim their authentic sovereign inner light and truth for the sake of belonging, acceptance, nationality, identity, money, approval, and validation.

All of this comes at the cost of an individual’s inherent inner authority, self-sufficiency, self-validation, and self-accountability, the ability to live according to what truly resonates with their Soul, rather than tying worth and survival to a herd and a system engineered to keep people fearful, dependent, drained and enslaved by external approval to exist.

This is not ignorance curated by accident.

This is parasitic conditioning by hollow design.

Liberation begins the moment consent to self-betrayal is withdrawn by the many.

The exit from parasitic illusion is not found through rebellion, confrontation, or replacing one authority with another.

It begins the moment a soul turns inward, reclaims responsibility for its own energy, and stops outsourcing truth, worth, safety, and permission to any person, role, institution, or system.

Withdraw consent from what requires fear to function, exist. Step out of narratives that demand self-betrayal as the price of belonging. Choose authentic presence over performance, inner discernment over indoctrination, inner alignment over external approval.

The illusion starves when it is no longer fed attention, obedience, or emotional labor. Sovereignty is not granted, earned, or fought for, it is remembered when a soul stands still, listens deeply, and lives in quiet integrity, no longer available to be exploited and enslaved.
