

Starving the Illusion - When a Soul Withdraws Consent and Reclaims Its Inner Authority

by Pedro Lima

A parasitic, narcissistic, delusional, petty society refuses to recognize, honor, celebrate, or support the authentic sovereign growth of a soul that has remembered itself. A soul that has reclaimed, integrated, accepted, and embodied all parts of its being, and now stands anchored in its own inner compass, and inner authority.

In this self-inflicted, miserable, and mediocre hollow society, envy, jealousy, bitterness, resentment, pettiness, hatred, gaslighting, moral hypocrisy, and chronic self-victimization form the emotional framework of a spiritually impoverished collective. Both individually and systemically inner emptiness is disguised as hypocritical morality, status, righteousness, and control.

Within this hollow, surface-level hollow empire, individuals are conditioned through indoctrination to manipulate, deceive, exploit, scam, speculate, commodify, dominate, and extract validation from others, mistaking obedience and compliance for genuine human connection and hierarchical power for worth.

Herd mentality, trends, beliefs, behaviors, cultures, ideologies, dogmas, and hierarchical structures of misgovernance are meticulously curated to preserve obedience, subservience, conformity, and self-betrayal. These systems do not awaken souls, they manage and coerce them, keeping them fragmented, dependent, distracted, divided, and fearful of their own truth.

Self-deception and self-betrayal are performed in the name of pleasing, appeasing, and belonging, are glorified, praised, institutionalized, normalized, and celebrated. Thus emerges a self-conditioned, and self-enslaved society, trapped in karmic loops of fear, pride, ignorance, misery, and mediocrity, not by force, but by consent.

Rather than facing inner transformation or aligning with truth, this shallow society hides in the shadows of denial, plotting, gaslighting, deceiving, complaining, blaming, judging, lobbying, corrupting, enforcing, coercing, punishing, exploiting, and dominating others to soothe fragile, unintegrated, and highly insecure egos terrified of self-vulnerability, irrelevance and insignificance.

Curated performative falseness, dishonesty, deceit, and fragmented hollow performative masks of distortion and dysfunction are cultivated where inner substance is absent. Clinging desperately to ideologies and beliefs that silence the authentic inner voice, this society feeds on disempowerment because a sovereign soul cannot be controlled, consumed, exploited or owned.

That is the truth it fears most.

Turn inward, not to escape the world, but to remember and retrieve yourself from it.
Withdraw your energy from curated identities and roles that demand your inner authentic sovereign voice silence.

Release the need to be understood by those invested in your downfall and silence.
Sit with the parts of you once abandoned for approval, safety, or belonging and welcome them home.

Listen beneath the layers of conditioning until the voice that remains is unmistakably yours.
That voice is not loud. It does not command. It remembers. And remembrance is the beginning of Self-liberation.

“A parasitic society cannot tolerate a soul that remembers itself because remembrance dissolves obedience, and inner sovereignty starves every parasitic societal system built on self-betrayal.” - Pedro
