

Societal Enslavement Paradigm rooted in Scarcity, Compliance, and the Illusion of Stability

by Pedro Lima

Parasitic, deceptive, corrupt, manipulative, exploitative, hierarchical, and oppressive societal systems of governance do not exist to serve life, truth, harmony, or collective well-being.

They exist to preserve themselves. They manufacture smokescreens, narratives, indoctrinated propaganda, and distractions designed to distort perception and keep others dependent on hollow, self-serving, soulless agendas rooted in greed, entitlement, prideful ignorance, unresolved wounds, suppressed trauma, fear of vulnerability, and terror of insignificance and irrelevance.

In a society driven by shallow, surface-level, profit-based scarcity mindsets, conflict is engineered and division is cultivated by design. Distraction is not accidental, it is strategic.

The many are kept stressed, pressed, surveilled, confused, doubting, and policing one another, consumed by fear, scarcity, judgment, unworthiness, and powerlessness, while a small fraction hoards the vast majority of the planet's resources, building wealth at the cost of others well-being.

The many are left to fight over crumbs and jobs, conditioned into a docile, complacent, self-victimized, codependent herd that agrees, consciously and unconsciously, to outsource its inner authority, self-reliance, self-sufficiency, self-validation, and authentic sovereignty to false authority figures and their corrupt systems of domination and life-force extraction.

This herd feels discomfort walking into the unknown and unfamiliar and avoids accountability for its own inner state. It clings to illusions that keep it disconnected from self-sufficiency, self-responsibility, self-accountability, self-awareness, and self-discernment, disconnected from understanding how, where, and why it directs its attention, intention, energy, choices, and actions.

Dependency becomes normalized. Obedience becomes a curated survival strategy. Compliance and submission to hierarchical societal norms are reframed as virtue, a duty, a moral obligation.

Labor is glorified in this parasitic system not because it honors human dignity, but because it keeps the many surviving paycheck to paycheck, pressed, anxious, and compliant, while speculation, scamming, and price manipulation are normalized as "business as usual." Shelter is commodified. Scarcity is engineered. Lies are legislated through loopholes, lobbying, and hollow bureaucratic laws designed to protect greedy, soulless beings while disguising exploitation as a legality.

Prices are driven up or down to benefit those already hoarding, while smiling deception, manipulation, and entitled, narcissistic hollow grandiosity are performed behind false masks of professionalism and success, while, in the background, smearing, plotting, and backstabbing unfold in the climb up the hollow corporate ladder.

This hollow societal system thrives on spiritual impoverishment. It celebrates competition, secrecy, benchmarking, lobbying, and domination while cultivating moral hypocrisy, addiction to profit, emotional disconnection, and chronic victimhood.

Corporate monopolies expand with impunity, prioritizing stakeholders over collective well-being, extracting greedy hollow value from vulnerability, and exploiting others while calling it growth, progress, evolution, and efficiency.

The very institutions and corporations that manufacture herd dependency are the same ones glorified, worshipped, defended, and sustained through the cooperation and consent of a self-victimized herd that agrees to be manipulated, censored, punished, controlled, and exploited, mistaking familiarity for safety and obedience for stability.

Labor becomes an energy harvesting source. Human life becomes expendable. The many are kept anxious, confused, and compliant, obedient and subservient to “bosses,” “owners,” “masters,” false authorities who rely entirely on collective consent to dictate identity, worth, behavior, survival, culture, and submission within systems of modern enslavement disguised as progressive societal cultural survival parasitic paradigms.

But no manipulation, title, rank, institution, corporation, man made law, or alliance exempts anyone from karmic consequences. Intention does not override accountability. Motivation does not delay or cancel the unfolding of karmic judgment. No amount of ignorance, denial, or delusion shields anyone from the reality that what is sown energetically, ethically, and spiritually will be reaped in divine order, unapologetically.

These parasitic societal systems are not powerful because they are right. They survive because they are fed by a disconnected, and docile herd that outsources responsibility for its own inner state.

Self-liberation unfolds through self-remembrance, self-accountability, and the refusal to participate actively or passively in one’s own enslavement.
