

The uncompromising Sovereign Self

by Pedro Lima

I do not think, believe, behave, or express myself according to any individual or collective expectations, opinions, trends, or conditioned self-victimized narcissistic narratives rooted in egoic curated, fragmented identity self-preservation and illusion attachments.

I think for myself.

I move with self-discernment, grounded in the courage to stand firm in my inner core authentic values. I do not allow myself to be influenced, swayed, brainwashed or conditioned into obedience, compliance, subservience, or submission to external binding distorted parasitic illusions, judgments, assumptions, expectations, or beliefs of others.

Anything that demands my self-abandonment or self-betrayal has no authority over me.

I will not compromise my sovereign truth, not my authentic voice, not my intuition, not my inner authority.

I do not silence myself to be accepted.

I do not outsource my truth to belong.

I do not dim my light to fit illusions built on fear.

I carve my own story, my own purposeful authentic path.

I stand rooted in who I am, aware, present, self-led, self-sufficient, self-validated, inner aligned, inner coherent, knowing that there is no one and anything outside myself that can define or have control without my agreement and consent.

I return always to the heart as my guide, the soul as my compass, and presence as my home. Through lived experience, inner stillness, and conscious awareness, I choose to walk a path of remembrance, where truth is embodied, not performed; where wisdom is integrated, not just spoken from hollow intentions and words. From this space, I share not as authority over others, but as a reflection of what is possible when a human being chooses to return to themselves fully.

This is the essence of a sovereign soul embodying its humanness: a remembrance of inner wholeness, alignment, and the quiet power of living in authentic connection with one's own soul.
