

The Collective Agreement and Consent to Psychological Hive Consciousness Domestication

By Pedro Lima

A narcissistic, spiritually impoverished hive collective normalizes and reinforces a policing-state mentality rooted in fear, control, parasitism, and self-preserving survival consciousness. Within this fragmented narcissistic self-avoidant landscape, individuals project outward the unresolved chaos, wounds, trauma, and fears they refuse to confront within themselves, clinging to curated pain-based identities, self-conditioning narratives, fear-driven habits, emotional reactivity, and self-sabotaging patterns that shape their thoughts, intentions, decisions, and behaviors.

Rather than engaging in honest self-reflection, they hide behind performative false masks of superiority, hypocritical morality, victimhood, status, superior intellect, spirituality, or authority while remaining internally disconnected, emotionally fragmented, and spiritually hollow, empty.

Through gossip, manipulation, gaslighting, smear campaigns, deception, and psychological projection, they attempt to shape how others are perceived in order to preserve their own fragile egoic identities and avoid self-accountability for the pain and suffering they continue cultivating within themselves.

Unable or unwilling to confront their inner wounds, individuals unconsciously seek relief through collective validation, forming psychologically manipulative herd bonds, dynamics rooted in resentment, pettiness, bitterness, division, envy, jealousy, fear, and emotional dependency.

In these petty parties, hollow hive spaces, judgment becomes social currency, victimhood becomes an identity, and the denigration of others becomes a temporary escape from the emptiness created by self-abandonment and disconnection from authentic inner truth.

These collective self-victimized narcissistic hive dynamics become institutionalized through ideologies, dogmas, cultural and corporate paradigms, political systems, religious structures, educational conditioning, corporate exploitation, media manipulation, and hierarchical frameworks that normalize ignorance, domination, exploitation, emotional suppression, inequality, dependency, conflict, division, and obedience.

Entire societal systems begin reflecting the consciousness of a collective victimized hive mindset that has unconsciously agreed to trade inner discernment, sovereignty, and self-responsibility for external approval, belonging, security, justice, safety, validation, and survival for existence..

In this spiritually impoverished desolated landscape, human beings become commodities, numbers, things to be labeled, categorized, controlled, exploited, dominated, and subjugated. Relationships become transactional. Labor becomes a source of parasitic extraction. Politics, economics, religion, corporations, education, military structures, and media propaganda, curated narratives aligned with the oligarchic self-serving agendas of those who fund and own these hollow low-frequency energetic broadcasting systems, and that sustain themselves through the participation of individuals psychologically bound to fear-based survival, fragmented identities, and egoic curated attachments.

False hierarchies and artificially curated authority figures are elevated and worshiped while authentic self-awareness, emotional honesty, and sovereign discernment are suppressed.

The majority unconsciously outsource their inner authority, intuition, self-trust, and authentic voice to corrupt systems and individuals that never truly had their well-being at heart. To belong, to be accepted, to be validated, to be provided for, the collective silences their inner knowing and betray their authentic nature in exchange for conditional approval within systems that reward conformity, compliance, obedience, and subservience over conscious self-awareness and self-accountability for one's own inner world state.

Within this low-consciousness societal narcissistic survival paradigm, centralized hollow power, mass surveillance frameworks to subjugate and domesticate humans through fear and compliance, data collection is the currency for control and exploitation, overregulation, authoritarian control, and institutional coercion become normalized under the illusion of collective safety, justice, order, morality, or progress, while beneath these corrupt, parasitic hollow soulless structures exists the same ancient impulse: control through fear, profit from engineered scarcity, dependency, psychological fragmentation, and collective powerlessness.

The hollow self-serving individuals who rise to the top of the exploitative hierarchical systems frequently do so through profound self-abandonment, trading authenticity for status, integrity for power, soul for performative curated image, and truth for influence.

They become attached to titles, wealth, fame, control, and dominance over others while remaining internally disconnected from genuine human compassion and empathy.

Hollow crowns cannot restore inner wholeness. No title, institution, ideology, ritual, or external worship to any deities exempts anyone from the consequences of what they continuously cultivate within themselves.

Divine order does not negotiate with curated identities, social status, ideological performance, or self-victimized narratives and curated prideful ignorant justifications. Every intention, action, manipulation, distortion, and harm cultivated within consciousness returns to its source.

What individuals repeatedly embody inwardly becomes the energetic reality they ultimately must face. Prideful ignorance, emotional manipulation, corruption, cruelty, exploitation, and conscious deception carry consequences regardless of the stories used to justify them.

Every human being possesses free will and the power of choice within their conscious experience. With each thought, intention, action, and behavior, individuals participate in shaping not only their own inner reality but also the collective field they contribute to sustaining. Ignorance is a choice. Self-awareness is a choice. Manipulation is a choice. Integrity is a choice, and with every choice comes a consequence.

No man-made law, title, institution, hierarchy, or worldly authority stands above universal balance and order. Human consciousness was never created to be domesticated, psychologically enslaved, spiritually diminished, or exploited. It was meant to express itself authentically, consciously, and freely through embodied presence aligned with inner truth.

Self-liberation does not emerge through blind worship, external saviors, performative spirituality, institutional dogma, or dependency upon middlemen figures claiming ownership over truth.

Liberation is remembered and reclaimed within the conscious integration of the self, through heart-mind coherence, emotional honesty, self-awareness, discernment, and the embodied remembrance of one's authentic essence without egoic attachment.

What is cultivated within inevitably returns. What is sown will always be reaped. Not as punishment, but as a consequence. Not as revenge, but as universal balance.

What goes around will always, inevitably, come around.
