

The Choice

If you could choose between one of the following, which would it be? Falling in love. Watching someone fall in love and writing a play about it. Watching a play someone has written after watching someone fall in love. Reading a review of a play someone has written after watching someone fall in love. Changing the subject to something other than love.